Shoreline, road future at issue
City of Marquette considers options for Lakeshore Boulevard
March 13, 2013
10:21 AM | from: "The Mining Journal"

Marquette - A shoreline restoration and road relocation project being considered by the city of Marquette could cost more than $22 million.

"I don't believe we're far enough along in front of this issue and even with the ultimate legal — how much is the option," Dennis Schrader, Marquette's director of planning and community development, said last week when speaking during a community forum on the topic. "I think this is intended to start a community conversation.

"At the forum, city staff and representatives from the Saginaw Bay Boat Club discuss the benefits of options for the corridor along Lakeshore Boulevard between Iselin and Wright streets.

At the forum, city staff and representatives from the Saginaw Bay Boat Club discuss the benefits of options for the corridor along Lakeshore Boulevard between Iselin and Wright streets.

..."