Donations needed to keep float copper in Marquette

MOUNT ROYAL, Marquette - The Student Affairs Preservation Society has pledged a $40,000 donation to the Marquette University chapter of the National Student Association to help keep the historic float copper in the Jennings-%E2%80%93Copperhead building.

The donation will help fund the annual maintenance of the copper, which is a beloved symbol of the university and a key feature of the Jennings-%E2%80%93Copperhead building.

The Marquette Student Union has pledged $50,000 to support the maintenance of the float copper, and Marquette University has committed to matching the donation from the Student Affairs Preservation Society.

The float copper is located in the basement of the Jennings-%E2%80%93Copperhead building and is a popular gathering spot for students, faculty, and alumni.

The Student Affairs Preservation Society is a student-led group that works to preserve and enhance the sustainability and aesthetic value of the university campus.

The donation is part of the society's ongoing efforts to maintain the historic and culturally significant aspects of the university's architecture.

The float copper is a unique feature of the Jennings-%E2%80%93Copperhead building and is an important part of the university's identity and history.

The donation will help ensure the continued preservation of this beloved symbol of Marquette University.
